Hospital Meeting With Success

The people of Didsbury and district will be interested to know that the General Hospital in Didsbury is meeting with encouraging success. The month of March has been the most successful month so far. Seventeen patients received treatment in the hospital during the month, with a total number of 133 hospital days, and earnings amounting to $115. It would seem that, as the efficient work of the hospital is being better understood by the people, it is being made to serve an increasing number of people in need of such care, and the excellent care given the patients has been productive of good recovery. With the efficient nursing staff, in the person of Mrs. Taylor, matron, and Misses A. E. Hennie and M. D. Craig as assistants, the hospital is in the position to give the best of care to all coming for treatment, at least up to the capacity of the building.

At the meeting of the Hospital

Board, held on Tuesday, April 13th with all members present, after careful consideration of the needs of the hospital, it was decided to increase the schedule of patients' fees to help meet the increased cost of operating the hospital. From May 1st, the rates for all residents of the municipalities of the town of Didsbury, the Municipal Districts of Mountain View and Westend, will be three (3) dollars per day. For those coming from outside the bounds of these three municipalities the rate will be three dollars and fifty cents ($3.50) per day. It is recognized that these rates will be insufficient to meet all the expenses of operating the hospital, but it is the desire of the members of the Board to keep the rates within the reach of all requiring hospitalization last summer.

Both the Doctor and Mrs. Reid will be missed greatly but it is hoped that the change will be for the Doctor's benefit, which is the main consideration.

At this meeting the resignation of G. G. Webber as Secretary-Treasurer was received and accepted to date from April 30th, and Mr. George A. Wrigglesworth was appointed to that office. He will assume his new duties on May 1st.

Mayor J. M. Reed was a business visitor to Calgary on Monday,

Prominent Men Leaving Town

Two changes are to take place in the business and professional life of Didsbury within the next few weeks.

Mr. T. W. Cuncannon, manager of the Union Bank, will be transferred to a larger branch of the Union Bank at Pincher Creek in a few days, while Dr. G. M. Reid is giving up his local practice to take a position at the Frank Hospital about May 1st.

Both of these gentlemen have been very popular in the business and social life of the town and their departure is distinctly Didsbury's loss. Mr. Cuncannon came here ten years ago, being transferred from the branch of the Traders' Bank at Beeton, Ont., to the branch of the same bank here before its incorporation into the Royal Bank. He was then secured by the Union, with which organization he has been connected ever since. Mr. Cuncannon, while of a rather quiet disposition, has been the most popular manager of that local institution that Didsbury ever had. He was always affable and gentlemanly in his dealings with his customers and ready at all times to assist within his power any worthy cause. Mr. and Mrs. Cuncannon are also very popular in the social life of the town and Mr. Cuncannon has been one of our most enthusiastic curlers, also quietly taking his part in the athletic events of the life. They will be missed greatly in Didsbury, but their large number of friends will give them best wishes and congratulations on their promotion.

Dr. G. M. Reid returned from overseas last summer after four years in military service and again took up his practice in Didsbury, where he had been located for twelve years before his military service. His health was none too good when he returned and this winter has been exceptionally hard on him and he has to give up the strenuous life of a popular country physician to take a more settled position. In this case, as in the above Didsbury is again the loser in the departure of two of its popular social and professional members. The Doctor has been identified, although in a very quiet way, with the athletic activities of the town, especially in curling, and has also been president of the local branch of the G.W.V.A. since its organization last summer.

Both the Doctor and Mrs. Reid will be missed greatly but it is hoped that the change will be for the Doctor's benefit, which is the main consideration.

Didsbury Baseball Club Organised

At the meeting last Friday night, held in the P. R. Reed office, it was decided to organize a Didsbury baseball team. There are several good players in the district and H. W. Chambers and J. V. Berscht were appointed to get them together and make up the team. It is expected that Didsbury will have a first class ball team this season and be in shape to trim anything along the line.

Labor

In the savings departments of all banks there is a safe deposit department with convenience and safety for his savings. The ambitious wage-earner who lives by his wits and has a chance to save money may make a provision for old age by depositing a deposit now, remuneratively. Financial independence may be gained by steady accumulation of small amounts.

Canada's and the World's Need

Occasions arise when it becomes the patriotic duty of every man, and woman too, to forget, neglect, even sacrifice, their own wants and interests for the general good of their country. Such an occasion arose with the outbreak of the Great War. The happiness and comfort of home, success in business achievement, the general betterment of one's position in life and the promotion of the family's welfare, usually and properly the chief worldly concern of any person, suddenly became matters of minor importance. The liberty of the whole human race, the basic principles on which civilization rests, the ideals and independence of the nation itself, were jeopardized and their destruction threatened. In these circumstances, one's devotion to purely personal interests became utterly selfish and unworthy.

Generally speaking, a man serves his country and the cause of humanity best and well when he devotes his best thought and energies to the everyday work which calls for attention, providing the work in which he is engaged is legitimate and worthy. It should not be, of course, a selfish absorption in his own interests to the exclusion of the community. It is a struggle in progress to rehabilitate men who have a merely regard for personal gain irrespective of the efforts of others, and wholly neglected the more things in life and of community and national interests. But, on the whole, the person who does his work faithfully and well is serving his country and fellowmen at the same time.

This let it be repeated, is true as a general proposition, but it was never more universally true than it is at the present time. The needs not only of Canada, but of the whole world, the needs of that civilization which was saved from destruction on the battlefields of the world during the historic years 1914-1918, call imperatively to every Canadian to "be on the job" doing his own particular work at this time.

There is no need for emphasizing this fact because there is in evidence on all sides of an inclination to "let up," to put less effort into one's work, in a word, to get through the day as quickly and easily as possible, and this is often, because of the wholesale destruction of men and wealth caused by the war, there is greater need than ever before for a maximum of productive effort. As has been pointed out over and over again, not only do men insist upon easier work, shorter hours of labor, more pay and more of the good things of life, but they become indignant if the price of these goods goes up. Yet it must be apparent to all intelligent and reasonable men that if less is produced and more is consumed scarcity must result and a rise in prices becomes as inevitable as the force of gravity.

This general relaxation is, however, a natural sequence of the war, and it lucky from midnight to noon.

The price of tea and coffee has been shooting up—but that doesn't bother the thousands who now enjoy

THANKFUL MOTHERS

Once a mother has used Baby's Own Tablets she will little ones she would use nothing else. The Tablets give such results that the mother has nothing but words of praise and thankfulness for them. Among the mothers most thoroughgoing in Canada who praise the tablets are Mrs. David A. Anderson, New Glasgow, N. S., who writes—"I have used Baby's Own Tablets for my children, and can assure you that there should come a period of slackness, lessened production and lack of interest in work. It is the same feeling which forces a man after a period of tense application to take a holiday. The war saw an extreme of work and sacrifice, now we are having an extreme of everybody wants as much as possible by giving or paying as little as possible.

But along this path lies individual and national loss, and, if persisted in, ultimate disaster. If we all look upon the world as our orange to be squeezed dry, at a time when a desperate struggle is in progress to rehabilitate it, then we are but hastening our own disappointment and increasing our loss. On the other hand the man or woman who refuses to let themselves down, and who sticks to their job now will find in a comparatively short time that they have not only rendered real service to their country and the world, but that they have enormously advanced their own interest and placed themselves in a strong position to meet and overcome any of the adversities which may yet have to be faced before this old world is again established on a normal foundation.

Big Road Contracts to be Let

Eight Hundred Miles of Road to be Built in Manitoba

Tenders for grading about 800 miles of roads will be called for in Manitoba within the next two months, according to information supplied by the province. This work will be let in contracts of from two to 75 miles.

The work will be done under "The Good Roads Act," which has been in successful operation for the past six years. Up to the present, about 1,200 miles of road has been graded and about 400 miles gravelled under the act.

In addition to the road work, it is expected that over 100 concrete bridges will be constructed. The bridge work will include a steel bridge 65 feet long over the Red River; a concrete arch 100 feet clear span over the La Salle River; several bridges of concrete over the Assiniboine River, and a number of bridge from 30 to 50 feet clear span. Up to date, 384 bridges have been built under "The Good Roads Act," of which 271 were of concrete.

It is expected that over 4,000 miles of grading will be done in Manitoba within the next four years, and a large percentage of this mileage is to be gravelled.

He came upon one decidedly original reply. The question, "State in which enlisted," was answered by the answer, "strictly sober."

WEDNESDAY, APR. 21, 1920.

In another column will be found the Town Financial Statement for the year 1919. The taxpayers should take this important report into their secret places and thoroughly study it. It may look, on the face of it, a rather complicated affair, but it contains such important matter that it should be thoroughly dissected by everyone who has to pay taxes and whose property therefore is subject to whatever condition may arise, an appreciation or depreciation through very high or very low tax rates which may have to be placed in the future.

A perusal of this statement shows a debt of $7,367.01 on current account outside of debenture indebtedness, which of course is not changeable in one year but over a number of years. On the face of this the outlook is none too rosy, but against this indebtedness is chargeable $7,656.20 raised in back taxes by the C. and E. Townsite Co., which has been accumulating fast the last three or four years. If this amount is deducted our indebtedness would only be $330.81, which would be a very small item considering all things.

We do not like to criticize the Town Council because our experience in municipal affairs, especially financial, has shown us that that is one of the most difficult departments which they have to conduct. However, we cannot help but state that more energetic measures with this speculative company in the last two or three years might have altered our financial standing to-day considerably. Of course there has practically been only two courses to take, tax enforcement or to enter suit to recover. Either one of these actions could have been taken up until a year ago, but it seems now that because of some amendments made to the Municipal Act action cannot be taken until after July 1st this year. It is unfortunate that the Council has not taken more energetic measures before in this matter but they should certainly take the first opportunity to make this Company come to time.

THE COW PUNCHER

BY ROBERT J. C. STEAD

Copyrighted, Canada, 1913, By The Musson Book Co., Ltd., Toronto. Printed by Special Arrangement.

Then, with a sudden shock, it came to him. It was the hillside on which Dr. Hardy had come to grief; the hillside on which he had first seen her bright face, her wonderful eyes, the poignancy of grief chilled him, sweeping away his chagrin philosophically. Her skin was young and clean and entrancing, thrust before him in an instant out of the wonderful days of the past. And would she always be low-spirited? He saw her at every road corner, every street corner, on every prairie hill, in every office-hour; must he catch her fragrance in every breeze, see the play of her hair in every beam? must he have her eyes ever — soft eyes now veiled in tears and softing glimpses of what might have been? With an aching heart, he sank into a chair, his hands clasped over his head, his face too big enough to hide him from Irene Hardy. There was no way out.

He started his motor and, even in his desire to feel a thrill of pride at the handful gears engaged, and the car climbed back to its place on the trail. As all refreshments, then, in things of love, were lost to him, he said, "I'm blood." He followed the trail. When soon now? The long-forgotten ranch buildings lay across the stream and behind the tongue of sand. The last time he had crossed the footbridge had destroyed them. He forced the stream without difficulty. That was where he had carried her, but he had to leave her, and, trudging gamely along, he walked carefully into the yard. That was where she had first called him Dave. . . . Then he found the doorway, and so down the stairs.

When the sun was well up he rose and walked about. His lips were parched; he found himself mithridatized with thirst, but he could not drink. He was parched, but he had only a mouthful; the water was flat and insipid. . . . The old cabin was in better repair than he had seen them since he had sprung the leak. It was mostly strong with cold webs; that was the room she had occupied. He did not go in, but sat down and so dozed.

Later he walked up the canyon. He must have walked swiftly, for the sun was not yet at the meridian when he found himself at the little node of the trail. He stopped to rest. It was that afternoon when they had fled, laid their hearts open to each other. He tried to recall that long-forgotten evening, but the recollection of the pain of its tenderness. Suddenly the remembrance hit him in his bones. "The day is coming," she had said, "when our country will want men who can stand up to us." She had laid down to his shoulder, her head on his shoulder, her arms around his neck, her fingers in his hair. "The day is coming," she had said, "when our country will want men who can stand up to us."

She whom he led him through the grove of sage trees on his way home to the ranch. Here in an open space he looked about, kicking in the dry grass. At length he said, "The day is coming." Bleeding, bone-weary he stood alone, looking with unseeing eyes across the shimmering valley.

"Browned," he said at length, "I'm sorry." The whole scene came back upon him: the moonlight and Irene's distress, and the little living body. And he had said he didn't know. He had said, "The voice of God all he knew was the critter who couldn't run was the one that got caught." . . . And he had said that was me. . . . He had said it was over nature.

And then they had stood among the trees and beneath the white moon and plodged their faith.

Again he had bent up, and the cold light flashed in his eyes. "The first thing is to kill the wolf," he said.

aloud. "No other innocent shall fall to his fangs. This—my country."

Darkness had again fallen. Dave found his car threading the streets of the city with its new-born excitement of war. He returned home to the garage; an attendant looked up curiously—it was evident from his glances that Dave was not the sort of customer with whom its household excitement of war. He returned to the garage; an attendant looked up curiously—it was evident from his glances that Dave was not the sort of customer with whom its household excitement of war.

He was in the city, and his words were exchanged. He stood for a moment in the street collecting his thoughts and rehearsing his resolves. He had analyzed his motives. He had analyzed his motives. The city reached out at a thousand hands to him—hands of habit, and association, and custom of these years, and hands of the world, drawing him back into the old groove again, getting him into the thing; he is a broke in the wheel, go round with the rest of us.

"No," he reminded himself. "No, I can't do that. I can't go back on him. First—to kill the wolf."

He remembered that he had given his revolver to Irene. And suddenly she sat with him again at the tea-table, and he saw her again. She had given his revolver to Irene. Well, there was another in his rooms. First to the west, the west.

In the hollow of the block in which he had his bachelor apartments Dave almost collided with a woman. He drew back, and the light fell on his face, but her was in the west, and there was her voice. "Oh, Dave, I'm so glad—why, what has happened?" The last words ran into a little tremble of pain as she noted his haggard face, and he did not wait for 24 hours nor slept for 36.

"You—Edith," he managed to say. "Whatever?"

She came toward him and placed her hands on his. "I've been here a hundred times—ever since morning—ever since Bert Morrison called up to say that you had disappeared—that you were missing. There isn't any place like it. You're all right, Dave, aren't you, Dave?"

"I guess I am all right, he managed to say. I just got a job—an important job. I must get it done. There is not time."

But her woman's intuition had gone far below his wife's wisdom. "There is something wrong with you, Dave. You never looked like this before. Tell me what is it. Tell me, Dave; not that I want to know, for know you not, but just that I—perhaps—know you."

Dave was silent for a moment, watching her. She had changed her position, and he could see that it had occurred to him that Edith Duncan was beautiful. If she had not quite the fine features of Irene, she had a certain softness of expression, a certain mellowness, even tenderness of lip and eye; a certain woman's delicacy.

"Edith," he said, "you're white, and the woman a man loves will fall him, and the woman he only likes—stays true. I should not have asked you, Dave," she said, "I'm sorry."

They stood a moment, neither wishing nor daring to say what you had sometimes must be done at once;

she reminded him at length. "Yes," he answered, "I have to kill a man. Then I'm going to join up with him."

Her hands were again upon him. "You mustn't, Dave," she pleaded.

"No matter what—what you mustn't do that is the one thing you must not do."

"Edith, you are not a man. You don't understand. That is the one thing I must do."

They stood a moment, neither wishing nor daring to fight for your country there. You will only increase its troubles in these troubled times. Don't you know that we're in it—for the sake of those who care?"

"Edith, you are not a man. You don't understand. That is the one thing I must do."

"Then come to my room and talk to me. Tell me what you want to say to me. I must talk to someone."

She followed him. Inside the room he had himself under control again.

The secret of his control that day was the remembrance that she thought him a good boy.

So he did not press the switch. He motioned her to a chair.

And then he told her the story. All he knew.

He had been sick and finished his nose and walked to one of the windows and stood looking with unseeing eyes up on the street. For the second time in his life Dave Elder had been sent to him to be sent again after all the years he still talked as friend to friend.

"That was it. She was under no delusion. Dave's eyes were as blind to the world as he had been that night when he had first told her of Irene.

And then they had stood together, holding Irene's head in his hands, looking with unseeing eyes across the shimmering valley.

"Browned," he said at length, "I'm sorry."

The whole scene came back upon him: the moonlight and Irene's distress, and the little living body. And he had said he didn't know.

He had said, "The voice of God all he knew was the critter who couldn't run was the one that got caught."

. . . And he had said that was me.

. . . He had said it was over nature.

And then they had stood among the trees and beneath the white moon and plodged their faith.

Again he had bent up, and the cold light flashed in his eyes. "The first thing is to kill the wolf," he said.

Most of all she could not tell him, now. "Yes, she was very sick indeed. If she should tell him now—she would be in her grave. He would be in his home. And afterwards he would despise her for having taken advantage of his love of weakness, and she would be alone there, and she would be alone."

Dave's eyes were open her form, silhouetted against the window. It occurred to him that he had formed Edith. He had analyzed his motives. He had analyzed his motives. The bitterness the city reached out at a thousand hands to him—hands of habit, and association, and custom of these years, and hands of the world, drawing him back into the old groove again, getting him into the thing; he is a broke in the wheel, go round with the rest of us.

"No," he reminded himself. "No, I can't do that. I can't go back on him. First—to kill the wolf."

West Demands Control of Our Natural Resources

Ottawa.—Development of Canada's natural resources and establishment of a more uniform system of experimental farms came up for discussion in the house of commons. The first question, that of natural resources, was raised on a motion by Captain Manion, Fort William and Rainy River, the second by Donald Sutherland, of South Oxford. Western members seized the opportunity again to urge transfer of western resources to the provincial governments. Dr. Cowin, Regina, argued that had the western natural resources been in the hands of the provincial governments, action to develop them would have been taken long ago. The present situation was "impossible."

"I myself heard Sir Robert Borden declare in 1911 that he would do all in his power to see that the resources were turned over to the provinces," Dr. Cowin declared further. He spoke of millions of feet of lumber and millions of tons of the best coal in Canada, lying with eight miles of the government-owned railway.

In his motion, Captain Manion urged that the government should, as soon as possible, "bring forward a policy having for its object the development of the natural resources of Canada."

He spoke on the need for developing Canada's resources. The government might take over development itself, or assist private enterprise. Capt. Manion did not stipulate that the government should adopt any particular method, but he strongly advised immediate action.

Major Redman, Calgary, favored scientific research in every possible way and advocated establishment of a government bureau on natural resources similar to that of the United States. There was plenty of coal in Alberta if railway rates could be modified to compete for eastern trade.

Appeal for Funds To Help League

God Help Our Children If League Is Allowed to Wither and Die

London.—Earl Grey, Premier Lloyd George, Admiral Beatty, former premier Asquith, Lord Robert Cecil, and John R. Clynes published an appeal in the London Times for 1,000,000 pounds sterling, "to keep fresh in the minds of the people of this country the spirit and ideals which underlie the covenant of the League of Nations."

The appeal points out what the League of Nations union has already done in its education campaign. It says that a million pounds sterling sounds like a large sum but that if the British people do not support the League of Nations with all their might and resources, "the League itself will assuredly wither and die and if the league should die, God help our children, for no human agency can save them from calamities to which those of our late war will appear as the mere crest of a wave."

Says Sims Was Indiscreet

Rodman Criticizes Rear Admiral For Publishing Confidential Conversation

Washington.—Admiral Hugh Rodman, commander-in-chief of the Pacific Fleet, told the senate investigating committee today that Rear Admiral Sims' letter to Secretary Daniels criticizing the navy's part in the war, was "very indiscreet."

"Admiral Sims' indiscretions," he said, "lay very particularly in his breach of confidence in making public an intimate and confidential conversation, which should have been held secret."

The witness referred to Sims' testimony that Admiral Benson, former chief of naval operations, told him prior to his departure for London, "not to let the British pull the wool over your eyes; we would as soon fight them, as the Germans."

Admiral Rodman said the publication of that statement by Admiral Sims, "indeed has had its effects upon the cordial relations which heretofore existed between us and one of our closest allies."

Abandon Control of Newsprint

Announcement Follows Decision Of Supreme Court in Price Bros. Case

Ottawa.—The board of commerce announces that it will not henceforth claim to exercise any control whatever over newsprint paper in Canada.

This announcement follows the decision of the supreme court in the Price Brothers case that newsprint paper was not a necessity of life within the meaning of that expression in the Combines and Fair Prices act and that the powers exercised by the board of commerce as newsprint controller were without jurisdiction. The board pointed out that the effect of the supreme court's decision is to render ineffective the board's control constituting the board of commerce as controller of newsprint paper in Canada, and for this reason the board announces its intention of abandoning the control of newsprint, unless the board is subsequently invested, if that be legally possible, with competently-granted powers.

The board's announcement adds that the supreme court's decision does not involve the general powers of the board of commerce, except in so far as it, to some extent, limits the interpretation which the board might place on the expression "necessity of life." The general powers, it is added, will be pronounced upon by a subsequent decision of the court.

This decision will follow a re-hearing in the supreme court on May 4, next, of certain points in the recent argument heard in the court to test the powers of the board of commerce as a price-fixing tribunal.

The Red army commander ordered that the mines be blown up, but the mine guards succeeding in damaging the Reds, although great damage was done to the mines."

Between the Recklinghausen region, is also in the hands of the government troops.

The occupation of the Mayence district also was a violation of the peace treaty, says the Hague Vaderland, in an article declaring that the German government in the Ruhr district likewise was contrary to the treaty of Versailles.

Strike Leaders Are Nominated

Winnipeg.—R. E. Russell, George Armstrong, W. A. Fritchard and R. J. Johns, four of the convicted strike leaders, were nominated for seats in the provincial legislature at a meeting of the Winnipeg branch of the Socialist party of Canada tonight. As Rev. William Ivans is on the tentative slate of nominations made by the Dominion Socialists, it was understood that the names of the Socialist Democratic party, six of the seven strike leaders given full terms, are likely to figure in what will undoubtedly be the most unique election in the history of Manitoba.

Newspaper Will Be Exhausted in 10 Years

Cleveland.—Newspapers on this continent will be without paper at the end of ten years unless there is conservation of pulp, declared Jason Rogers, publisher of the New York Globe, at a meeting of the Cleveland Advertising Club today.

"The output of print paper is now dwindling rapidly," he said, "and the outlook at the pulp mills of Canada and United States will not be adequate to meet the demand, even if the supply of spruce timber holds out."

—Rhine Republic Is Likely

Paris.—The newspapers of Berlin say today that news received from all parts of the Rhine provinces imparts the probability of a Rhine republic is imminent, according to despatches from the German capital.

Mrs. ROBERT BAIRD TELLS OF DODD'S KIDNEY PILLS

Belmore Lady states that she was weak and run down till she found relief in Dodd's Kidney Pills. "I can assure you that Dodd's Kidney Pills helped my aching back as none others ever did or ever will do." It is Mrs. Robert Baird, well known in Belmore, recently returned here who makes this statement. She is an enthusiastic believer in Dodd's Kidney Pills as a remedy for weak and run down kidneys. "I was both weak and run down all last summer," she states further. "And before my baby was born I used Dodd's Kidney Pills. They helped me in every way. I also had Dodd's Kidney Pills to take when I became ill and they benefited me greatly."

Women who are weak and unwell should look for Dodd's Kidney Pills. No woman can be strong and healthy if her kidneys are not doing their full work of straining the impurities out of the blood. Weak kidneys are the cause of many of women's ills. Ask your neighbors if Dodd's Kidney Pills do not make strong healthy kidneys.

Demand for Good HorsesHorses At This Season Are A Community Need

You should co-operate with your neighbors in order that some good horses may be brought in by private parties, or leased before the breeding season opens. Because:

1. The demand and price for good horses and mules is increasing in cities.
2. Farm demand is improving.
3. There is a shortage of good horses and mules of all kinds.

City trade is improving, because transportation users of all kinds have discovered after years of experience that horses furnish the cheapest of all sources of power on short hauls. Thus Harry Vickers, president of the Fuel Cartage Company of Chicago, says:

"There is work today that the horse cannot do—long distance hauling with railroad transportation—but the motor can never take the place of the horse, because the horse can do the work on short hauls just as rapidly and at a lessened cost of 25 to 40 cents on the tonnage, consequently we never allow a truck to displace a team. We will buy a truck to do the work that a horse cannot do, but we don't send a truck to do the work that a horse can do. It would be like having a dollar and throwing away 40 cents."

Of the farm demand, W. S. Corsa says: "Farmers are determined. Editors in country sales and prices for good horses have gone $33 a head the last thirty days, half-mile miles are bringing from $800 to $1,000 a pair."

Or the short hauls, says Mr. J. H. McCloskey, President of the McCloskey Transportation Company, Minneapolis, says: "What we teaming contractors want is good horses. We don't want gentle light weight, incapable of hard work, and selling cheap. We want horses that will weigh 1,700 pounds or more and we are willing to pay for them. A teaming contractor in this city paid $800 for a pair of five-year-olds yesterday that weighed 3,200 pounds. The big trouble is that the farmer expects us to pay high prices for a green horse, one that is liable to dislodge and is not properly broke. The buyer of such a horse is taking a big chance that he'll die or be laid up and, consequently, won't pay as much for him. Give us good sound, big horses with a little experience behind them. We can't get enough of them and the demand will never run out."

Claims of truck and tractor manufacturers that horses and mules are becoming obsolete are very properly met with skepticism. Why should horses and mules, which, according to your views, are obsolete and destined to speedy disappearance, be in greater demand and at higher prices than ever?"

The best thing a farmer can do is this: Spend money on stallions which is so good for the lungs and for coughs; also Oregon grape root, blood root, marsh root, Quaker root, etc.

Dominion Growth

It cannot be too clearly realized that the tremendous help which the British nations overseas have afforded the Allied cause in the late war, so far from making for the centralization of Imperial policy, has given to the separate members of the British Commonwealth such a title as they have never before had to decide their own destinies. That title is suitably recognized in their individual signatures to the Peace Treaty and in their representation on the assembly of the League of Nations.—Manchester Guardian.

A GOOD MEDICINE FOR SPRING USEHarsh Purgatives Should Be Avoided*—A Tonic Will Restore Your Energy

Not exactly sick but not feeling quite well? It is the way thousands of people feel in the fall and winter, a sign that the trying indoor life of winter has left its mark upon you. Easily tired, appetite failing, sometimes constipated. Pimples or eruptions may appear on the skin, there may be twinges of rheumatism or neuralgia. Any of these indicate that the blood is not of order, and these symptoms may easily develop into more serious trouble.

Do not dose yourself with purgatives as so many people do, in the hope of getting rid of what ails you. Purgatives gall through the system and weaken instead of giving strength. Any doctor will tell you this. This is a tonic that will help to bring the blood to a tonic that will help to bring the blood and nerves. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills can do this specifically and safely. This medicine enriches the blood, clears the skin, improves the appetite and makes tired depressed men, women and children bright, active and strong. As an example of the value of these pills we give the story of Mrs. S. G. Macague, N.W., who says—"I have good reason to speak in the highest terms of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. I regularly dose myself with them and suffer nothing from drowsiness, pain and weakness. In fact my condition was so bad that I was advised to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills and using several boxes thereof was a noticeable improvement. I continued using the pills for some time longer and found that I had lost my appetite, my old time lively appetite and was able to do my housework without my feelings weak and worn out as before. I began using the pills."

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills can be obtained from any dealer in medicine or by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Greetings from Asia

Hajjin, Siberia, Asia Minor, Feb. 12.
To the Readers of the Pioneer,
Dear Friends in the Homeland:

Greetings to you from the heart of Asia Minor. Some of you will be wondering how we are getting along in the field work among the Armenians.

During the trip up here we talked with many countries, well and people who assured us that the stories of the sufferings of the Armenians were highly and grossly exaggerated. But having travelled from Constantinople into the heart of the interior, and in whose home we have spent the time since last September in what we believe, we have seen far more than we have ever seen or beyond anything we have heard in America. The whole story has never been told because nobody ever can tell it.

It has been said that anyone who works in direct contact with Armenians cannot help but feel the risk of losing his mind. The scenes of the past months have made pictures in our memories that we shall never be able to get rid of. Our command is besieged again and again by the hungry mob, in whose fires is written the history of human suffering, and in whose forms we see the degradation of sin, dirt and disease.

They could not work, in picture to you this form of sin, the stooped shoulders, the skeletal forms the whimpering, pleading and the puffed out abdomen caused by eating grass. This may sound incredible to you, but we have not yet been able to find a man among these exiles who has not eaten grass. We have had our mouths at times as the swollen bodies still tear even at the bone. They come to us in all the stages of physical distress with all kinds of intestinal diseases along their way. They eat and sleep and drink outside our door in the favorite belief that something will happen. Whenever any of us appear the mass surges forward, clutching at us with freezing fingers and begging for help.

Distrust and fear is so different from what people at home in America think. They do not realize that to start a shop nor to go about as they please is not a joy to us, but a torment. Small wonder then that one worker remarked lately that they did not believe they could close the day's report "the same as we do".

They do not know anything except increased misery. They have had to have opened up solutions to their work to some extent to open war so as to help the people to help themselves.

There are the three classes that come, the hungry desperate, resounding cheering band, the less fortunate band and the third group

those cut off lonely who are too ostracized by their suffering to find of much use. Then there is the more intelligent class, who come for work and seldom ask for anything else.

Three-fourths of Hadjin was burned by the government in two-thirds of the houses belonging to citizens, and the right thousand who have been crowded into the houses that remain, fifteen or sixteen living in each small room. Instances of real mind, eagerly begged meadow land or those who have passed through in front of their experiences. The space does not permit me to go into detail, I will just mention two. One is our orphan's cook. Eight sisters went into exile with their husbands. They were prominent, well-to-do families. They were prominent, well-to-do families. The eight children and their wives were started out of the city, and were received, gathered up in the poor children, the potato remnants of the eight families, and returned with them to Hadjin. Having no home left, they lived in a tent in their garden, neither roof nor floor, nor walls, nor clothes except the miserable rag and tatters left. A common experience.

Great numbers of Kurdish refugees from the war zone are also here. I have personally investigated these cases. Many are living in stables where they have no fireplace or windows, and not even room for bed to lie down. Some have no roofs or eaves. I was able to rescue a sick Kurdish who was living in one of these caves with his six year old son. He fainted, who supported him by his gaiters. The cave was open to the cold north wind. Some have no roofs or eaves. The other six members of the family had already died of starvation on. There are still six hundred orphans in Hadjin besides those who have been taken into orphanages. Most of the children we have taken in have been rescued from Arab homes, but many a mother still carries an aching heart, wondering where her child is today.

We are learning a few things. Having no stoves, we took some of the galvanized roofing off one of the smaller buildings and made five. Dug the children's sites and pencils out of the mountain. Made our own brooms, tools, and brick for floor, chimneys, flowerpots etc. The pensels from the hide of a wild boar made us a wash brush. Soap is scarce and expensive, so have learned to use "skell", a sort of soapstone from the mountains, for washing heads. We saw our own lumber by hand, get our nails from the mias, and stretch cotton over the window in place of glass. Necessity is the mother of invention.

Such is life in Turkey, but we are hoping for a brighter future. For these she remains of this martyred race.

Yours among the poorest of the poor,

Mr. and Mrs. D. C. Eby.

ONE DOOR NORTH OF POSTOFFICE.

The wireless news service reports Spring as having left Butte on the way to Great Falls. The latter place fails to report the arrival, however, and it is feared that poor old Spring is lost in the mountains or hung up in the wire. Great hopes are entertained for an early rescue as a large party of Calgary real estate men have joined the search.
